Pt. Richmond Dons Gala Dress For Merry Xmas

Santa Claus is Coming to Town.

Since yesterday our community of Point Richmond has taken on a decided Christmas-sy atmosphere.

Installed in its customary place atop the public library, near the Park Place plaza, is the Christmas tree for this side of town. Thru the foresight and enthusiasm of our enterprising postmistress, Miss Viola Trainor, for the Point Richmond branch postoffice, and of Harry N. Palmateer, our Point Richmond druggist, the neccesary funds have been raised to buy the tree; and City Electrician D. S. Delaney and his assistants have installed the lights which were donated by the Richmond Merchants Association, for which the Progress offers thanks on behalf of Point Richmond. In addition to the tree garlands have been arranged for further decoration.

Next Wednesday the Girl Scout group will sing Christmas carols under the tree, under direction of Miss Eva Garloff, local director.

Point Chapter Installs New Officers For Year 1937

Highspot in Point Richmond's society life each year is the annual installation of officers of the Point Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. Usually there are many distinguished visitors in attendance, and the colorful evening gowns of the ladies contrast with the formal attire of the gentlemen to make a pretty picture of the social evening of distinction in our community.

Last night was no exception to the rule when Joint Chapter installed Mrs. Olga J. B. Lee, as the Worthy Matron, her husband, Mr. Philip Lee, as the Worthy Patron, heading the corps of officers for the coming year. Acting as Master of Ceremonies was Ivor D. Owens, and Installing Officers included Past Matrons, Elizabeth L. Smith, Rose Dingle, and Jeanette Bottom, with Violet Hall as installing musician, Past Patrons Alfred Peteson and Herbert Harrison.

Other Officers

Other officers of the chapter will be: Mrs. Ellen Penny, Associate Matron and Arthur S. Whiteside, associate patron; Secretary, Mrs. Mary B. Moyle and treasur-

Individual Who Demolished Street Traffic Signs, Progress Building, Has Made No Effort To Repair Damage to Building

IDENTITY OF MOTORIST KNOWN

This Newspaper Is Willing to Be Tolerant But Patience After a Fortnight Ceases to Become a Virtue

One of the lowest crimes on the calendar, according to the Richmond Traffic Safety Council, and every newspaper editorial, in or out of Richmond, we have ever read on the subject, is that of hit-and-run driving while drunk. Isn't it so?

* * * * *

Now, a week ago Monday (on December 7th) ye editor and the printer of the Progress were working in a rear room of the Progress building when, all of a sudden, the building was shaken to its foundations by a severe shock and we both rushed to the front door, expecting to see a re-enactment of the earthquake of '06.

* * * * *

Immediately across the street was gathered a group of men inspecting a once stout city traffic sign, the 4x4 upright of which, shattered into three pieces, was strewn about the pavement. For a moment we were so engrossed with the phenomenon on the other side of the street we did not at once notice that the automobile tire track marks led directly from the demolished traffic sign almost straight across the street, up on our sidewalk. When we did notice this, we found out that impact of the car against our building had undoubtedly caused what we had thought to be an earthquake. Further inspection of the tire marks on our sidewalk disclosed the fact that the car had swung out into West Richmond Avenue, bound west; and then our ears apprised us of the noise of an automobile, apparently in distress, which was, a block away, hastily speeding from the accident. The car was a drab-colored sedan of a model several years old.

* * * * *

By the time the police had got on the job, a few minutes later, the car and its driver had disappeared; but further investigation by the R. P. D. in a few hours had brought to light the name and address of the automobilist. Later, the Progress was assured by the police department that the said driver would see to it that the building was repaired.

* * * * *

Now, while we have some pretty severe ideas about hit-and-run drivers, especially if it looks as if the driver was either reckless or drunk, we hope that the milk of human kindness has not entirely dried up within us; and prompt repair of the building, which is owned by Point Richmond's beloved patriarch, Henry

Through A WOMAN'S EYES

IT MAY TAKE TWO TO KEEP PEACE, BUT ONE CAN DO A LOT

"WILL you kindly write something in your column on the fact that just as it takes two people to quarrel it takes two people to keep peace" writes one of our readers.

"Some time ago I determined that there should be no more friction between my husband and myself. I realized that as you once said, 'it is much better to be nice than to be right,' that getting one's own way isn't nearly as important as being happy. And I made up my mind to let nothing interfere with absolute accord between us.

"And do you know, it seemed to work. All the little things in which I did exactly as he wanted to do didn't matter anyway, and the effect on my husband was marked. He just expanded under the experience of never being cross and outdid himself to be nice to me!

"Everything went beautifully until I just had to mention in the nicest way, shortcomings of his which if not corrected will work to his great disadvantage—a carelessness in manners and dress that I have tried for years to counteract, without making the slightest impression on him. I did this in the nicest way, entirely for his own sake, and I assure you were the positions reversed I should be only too glad to try to correct such faults in myself. But no—the slightest suggestion of criticism, and the sun turned to black clouds and lo, there was dissention! So you see it takes two to keep peace."

I should like to say to our reader "You are absolutely right." But in sincerity I am afraid I cannot do that. I must say that while one person may not be able, absolutely alone, to keep a situation of perfect peace and happiness, one wise person can do a great deal! And I should like to point out to our friend this thought: In this matter of keeping a sense of values and giving up one's way for the greater good, isn't it important to include in the things we are giving up the attempt to change the person with whom we are living? We have found, haven't we, that that is rarely possible, and that the attempt and the insistence result only in friction. And if the price of happiness is accepting the faults with the virtues, and not trying to change them, even "for his own good"—why then the price is not too high!

P. S.: If the faults were of a too serious nature, there would be no question of keeping happy by letting them alone. See?

Come Spy by Thornton W. Burgess

BILLY MINK opened his eyes. At first he couldn't think where he was. Everything about him was strange. Then all in a flash it came to him where he was. He was in a dark corner of the haymow in the big barn where the rats lived.

Billy yawned, then he stretched first one leg, then another. He yawned again, stretched some more, then lay quiet for a few minutes trying to decide whether to take another nap or hunt those rats again.

"I may as well learn all about this barn while I am here," thought Billy. "One never knows when such knowledge may come in handy. Besides, I want to find out where all these rats live. How they did squeal and squeak when they discovered me!" Billy chuckled at the memory. "It is great fun to hunt them."

Billy lazily got to his feet and arched his back, which was one way of stretching. Then he started out to explore the big barn. Of course he didn't go far before he smelled a rat. That is to say, he smelled the scent left by the feet of a rat. Right away Billy forgot everything but the fun of hunting, the game of hide-and-seek in which death was the price of being caught. He started out along the trail of that rat. By and by, way down under some boxes he came to a nest. It was made of old rags, torn paper, and other bits of rubbish. Billy didn't knock to find out if any one was at home. No, indeed. Billy didn't knock. He just popped his head right in. He expected to find some babies at home, if no one else, because he knew that there are babies most of the time in the home of a rat.

Right then Billy got his first surprise. That nest was empty! Yes, sir, it was empty. There had been babies there, as his nose told him, but they had been carried away. Billy hunted about a bit until he found the trail leading away from the nest. This he followed. It led downstairs to a hole in the barn floor, through this to the ground, and straight to an opening which led out of doors.

"Huh!" muttered Billy. "This is queer." He ran about a bit, and it didn't take him long to discover that there were many tracks leading to that opening out of doors. He could tell by the smell that those rats had gone out and not come back.

"It looks as if my future dinners had run away," muttered Billy, and then he began to explore that barn in earnest. There wasn't a hole or crevice or cranny in it that he didn't poke his nose into. There wasn't a rat nest there that he didn't find. But not a glimpse of a single rat did he get, nor the squeak of a single voice did he hear. There wasn't a rat in the barn! When he had gone to sleep there had been many. He had heard them squeaking all about him. Do you wonder why he was surprised?

THE OTHER WOMAN LIVES JUST AROUND THE CORNER

IT may seem unreasonable, but most men cannot understand why a woman who is usually happy and loving should have recurring periods when her whole character seems changed. He cannot appreciate the distress, the discomfort that all women must endure. He does not know what it is to do housework with an aching back and failing energy. All he does know is that other women seem more cheerful by comparison.

Are you such a three-quarter wife?

Don't let the ordeals that all women face cause you avoidable discomfort or endanger your home. Do as so many wise women have done—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

LAST RITES for EDW. McDUFF

An immense throng of friends from all walks of life assembled at the bier of Edward McDuff on last Monday and paid a final tribute of loyalty and esteem to him who had shown himself to be a true American gentleman and a leading citizen of this city.

A devout Catholic, the rites of the Church of his faith were administered by clergy who had known intimately the good of the man now gone from this mundane sphere: Father Matthew Smith, present pastor Our Lady of Mercy Church, was the celebrant at the solemn requiem mass; Father Michael Crotty, of St. Mark's, the deacon; Father Egisto Tozzi, the sub-deacon. And in the respected attendants in the sanctuary were Father William Cleary, master of ceremonies, Father William Hennessey, of San Francisco, and Reverend Patrick S. Ryan, of Stockton, and Reverend P. J. Brennan, dean of St. Joseph's of Berkeley. The choir was from St. Mark's Church in Richmond.

A Broadminded Man

Not Catholics were hundreds of those who attended the rites, but, broad-minded, respecting his faith as Ed McDuff would have respected theirs, the pallbearers were chosen from the intimate friends of a man who had a legion of friends. They were: James P. Arnold; Councilman Walter J. Johnson; Captain Oliver Wylie; George Lee, financier; Antonio Mazza, merchant; and Patrick Logan, of Martinez.

The funeral cortege left the home at 9:30. Mass was at ten, and interment at St. Joseph's Cemetery followed.

As the last spadeful of earth is poured over the remains of our true friend, a fate that must one time come to us all, let us besides expressing our condolence for the grief of the bereaved widow, Mrs. Mary McDuff, the nephew, Francis J. McNamee, and others, just remember the vigorous Ed McDuff of old, and be thankful that Point Richmond was his home.

"Requiescat in pace." (Rest in peace).

Young Rapelje became eligible for membership in the San Gabriel C. of C. a short time ago when he opened his own model airplane supply store in his room at home. Funds for his business venture came from odd jobs and smaller enterprises.

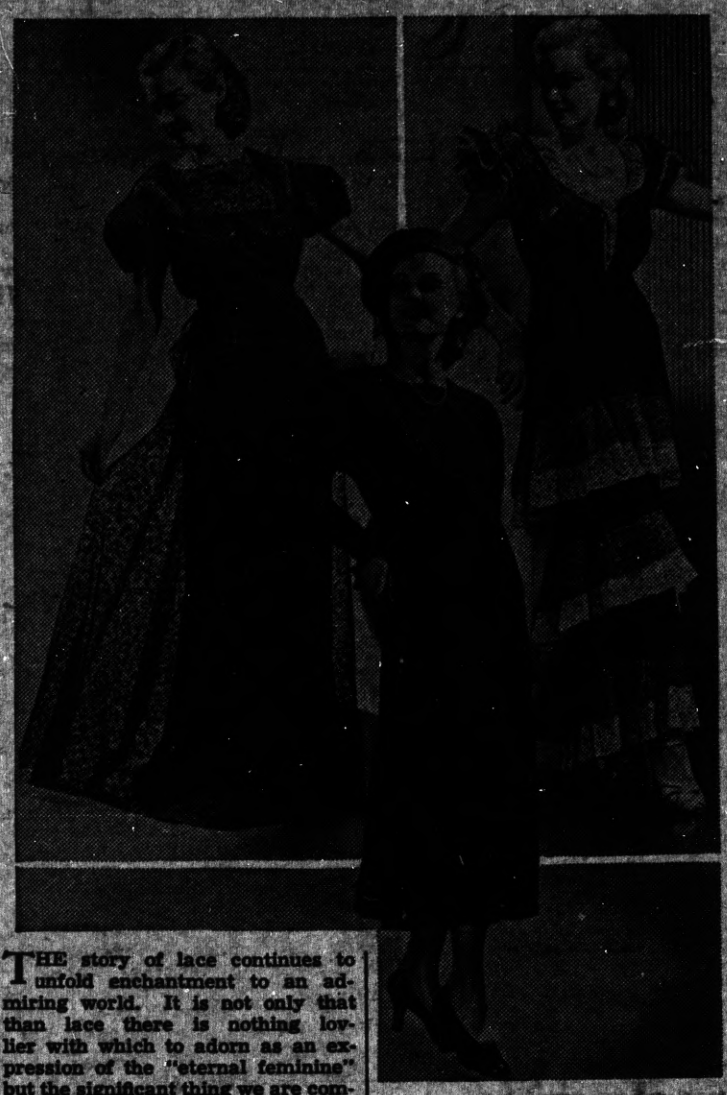
Lace Is in Every Phase of Fashion

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



THE story of lace continues to unfold enchantment to an admiring world. It is not only that than lace there is nothing lovlier with which to adorn as an expression of the "eternal feminine" but the significant thing we are coming to learn about lace is that in many of its modernized types it is absolutely practical for general wear. Through convincing demonstration in present-day fashions the theory has been utterly done away with that lace is a luxury to be reserved for "occasions" only.

The following might seem merely a pretty fairy tale to entertain. It is, however, a really and truly true story which has to do with the recent arrival from Paris of a prominent American who brought with her a perfectly exquisite and thoroughly practical wardrobe fashioned all of lace. Of course this collection embraced laces of versatile type for the lingerie as well as sports and evening clothes are each and every one of lace. The thrill uttermost and the argument conclusive as to the practicality of lace is a raincoat of handsome close-woven waterproofed lace. We hasten to assure that the raincoat has been put to the test time and time again, proving to be water repellant, and a sure protection.

To be sure, every worthy tale must have a moral or deliver a message and here it is—the happy possessor of this most charming and replete lace wardrobe is telling her friends that for travel lace clothes are eminently practical and satisfactory. Not only does lace prove flattering at all times but a vitally important thing about lace clothes is that pack them as hurriedly as you may they come out unwrinkled, maintaining a well groomed appearance without the necessity of pressing.

There is no end to the types of lace now available. You will find a lace tuned to your every need and to every mood of fashion. In the lace story for winter, it is the daytime dress made of wool lace that is making the headlines. A stunning model is pictured in the foreground of the illustration. It is of suede-finished brown wool lace in a heavy fabric type which makes the perfect thing for daytime street wear. To trim this handsome frock, Piguet uses a stitched sheer fabric woven of wool the same as made the lace, bordering the square neck, for the sash belt and to finish the side seams. We venture to predict you'll be deciding on a wool lace frock for your "fashion-first" this winter.

You can see from the beguiling dance frock shown to the right that designers are doing delightfully original things with lace. Chanel's evening and dinner dresses in ankle-length were a feature of her recent showings in Paris. She has a particularly charming dress as pictured with a dipping hemline starting from the ankles in front, done in Chantilly lace in pink and in black. The tiers of the skirt are matched by the cap sleeves in alternating ruffles of pink and black.

The dress illustrated to the left was one of the hits in the Lelong collection, and considered by him one of the best of his creations. He did it in several fabrics, including lace. For the lovely gown here shown he used one of the lovely filmy laces now so modish in an interesting delicate patterning. The feature of the pleated sleeves is also carried out in the little back peplum which stands out in quaint bustle affect. The girdle is matching suede.

Fashion Notes

Brigh-colored hose are scheduled for a revival.

Muffs are comparatively unimportant this season.

The season's hats for little girls are neat and charming.

Sheer black woolen with black lace is smart for daytime dresses.

Blouses cut like men's shirts are perfect with your tailored tweeds.

Directoire lines inspire most of the fall and winter clothes.

Broadcloth skirts for formal wear are being made with a raised waistline.

The high-flying hats that are in vogue really stay on the head very well.

Much satin is featured in Rosebienne's collection, in white and black lacquered textures.

Black with color, and all-black as a background for pearls or sparkling jewelry, is seen everywhere.

Empress' Famed Tea

The late empress of China was almost as famous for her tea as for her iron grip on the government. All guests at court were permitted to drink the old woman's favorite brew, and tea experts tried to match the blend after they had failed to worm the secret from servants. It was not until after the empress' death that the secret leaked out. She gave the remarkable delicacy to her tea by mixing it wit' dried honeysuckle and jasmine blossoms. The tea itself was from the first pickings of the imperial plantations and was the finest grown.—Chicago Tribune.

To School for a Wife

The most famous marriage in the entire history of archeology, and one of the happiest, was that of the renowned Dr. Schliemann, discoverer of the ruins of ancient Troy and the treasures of Mycenae, declares George Horton in "Recollections: Grave and Gay." Rich and already celebrated, Schliemann visited Athens and presented himself at a young ladies' academy in search of a wife. He made the announcement that he would marry that one of the girls who should first commit to memory "The Odyssey" of Homer.

The result was an epochal study of the blind poet. In a few days one of the candidates announced that she was ready. Called to the test, she recited and recited the sonorous lines, till the doctor was convinced and completed his part of the bargain.

"Mrs. Schliemann told me this herself," says Mr. Horton, "and assured me that she still remembered and could recite the whole 'Odyssey.'"—Chicago Tribune.

CHRISTMAS AT THE POINT

garty was presented by the P.T.A. The splendid program, ranging all the way from dandy numbers by the children themselves to a real honest-to-goodness puppet show delighted the children who attended.

After the program, Santa Claus came 'direct from the North Pole' and, with the help of the gracious ladies of the PTA gladdened the hearts of the boys and girls by handing out Christmas candies & canes. After the party at the school Old Santa, escorted by a great company of the children, paid a visit to the Point Richmond business section, giving a welcome to the stores. He was last seen entering Gus Gilg's barber shop. It is rumored that he had his private airplane out in back of the shop. At any rate, Santa did not come out of the shop, disappeared completely, to return on Christmas Eve.

NEW SANTA FE PUBLICITY CHIEF APPOINTED

Announcement was made today by W. J. Black, passenger traffic manager of the Santa Fe Railway, of the appointment of Roger W. Birdseye as general advertising manager.

An Underground Ocean

Scientists believe that below a depth of six miles in the crust of the earth there are no pores or cavities in which water could collect. For this reason it is believed that the underground waters of the earth are all above that level. It is estimated that the total quantity of underground water in the crust of the earth measures about 265,000,000 cubic yards, or nearly one-third the amount of water in the oceans.—Washington Star.

AND-RUN DRIVER SMASHES BUILDING—FORGETS

Sierenberg, would have been acceptable to us, and we would have "skipped it." This, in spite of the fact that it could have happened that a blind person ,or a child, or a woman, or "someone who was not looking that way" might have been crossing the avenue at that hour (5:30 p.m.). And how could we know that the individual who would run away from a few dollars damage would not also run away from a serious or a fatal accident. Nevertheless not also run away from a serious or a fatal accident? Nevertheless 99 per cent of the people we know, we just "skipped it," and expected that effort would soon be made to repair the damage to the demolished street sign and to our building as the unlucky culprit had assured the police department he would do.

* * * * *

Sure enough the street sign was fixed in a few days; but, here, nearly two weeks later, not a sign of activity in repairing the building in which this newspaper is published. Mr. Sierenberg tells us that he, too, was informed by the police department that the driver had said he would repair the damage.

* * * * *

Moral of the entire story is this: When one is a hit-and-run type of driver and happens to hurt a fellow who is willing to turn the other cheek" be careful that one does not stand by, after the accident for a couple of weeks and, figuratively, thumb one's nose at the victim—he might turn out to be newspaper publisher who would take a notion to publish one's name and address in the paper. This we are not going to do, in this issue. —H. R. B.
